

Comparison to Previous Hymnals

The following pages are from Christian Worship: Planning Guide.¹ This guide includes several hymn indexes, including an exhaustive Scripture index for the hymns. These pages are provided to expedite planning by those using the Year C Planner (<https://www.christianworship.com/resources> #9 under Look Inside) with its hymn suggestions from the new hymnal but whose congregations have not yet purchased the new hymnal.

As pointed out elsewhere, it is not necessary to have new hymnals to use the new lectionary and the Year C Planner. You can easily adapt the worship plan for CW21 in the Year C Planner to CW93. The new lectionary is available in the free test drive version of CW Service Builder (builder.christianworship.com) and for purchase from Logos. Since the Gospel readings in the new lectionary are almost always identical to the old, you can still use Planning Christian Worship (worship.welsrc.net) for hymn suggestions if you're still using CW93. (Just watch for any hymns that focus on a First or Second Reading that might have changed in CW21.)

See also the free resources provided at <https://welscongregationalservices.net/the-foundation/>. These are coordinated with the new lectionary.

Don't rule out a hymn title because you associate it with a tune that is unfamiliar. Fifty-one "old" hymns from CW93 and CWS have been retuned. You can quickly find these by noting tune names in green highlight in the Tentative Hymn List. This chart is #6 under Look Inside at the link above. You might want to download or bookmark this chart for quick access along with other important worship planning files.

While some of the retuning makes use of a tune not previously used in CW93 or CWS, most of the retuned hymns use familiar tunes. Some retuned hymns move from one familiar tune to a different familiar tune. Why? It was never just "change for the sake of change." Sometimes it was to use a tune most widely associated with a text. Sometimes it was to avoid overusing a tune. And, of course, some retunes move from a CW93 tune that did not catch on adequately.
